

Redexis appoints Juan Lasala as non-executive chairman

23 July 2025

Redexis, an energy infrastructure company, has appointed Juan Lasala as non-executive chairman of the company. With a solid track record in the energy sector and in-depth knowledge of regulated environments, Lasala brings more than 25 years of experience having served as a director, CEO, and CFO in both national and international environments. His appointment will reinforce Redexis' commitment to an energy transition focused on infrastructure management and the promotion and deployment of renewable gases as a key driver of decarbonization.

Fidel López Soria, CEO of Redexis, highlighted: "We welcome Juan Lasala as non-executive chairman of Redexis, who will bring us his extensive experience in the energy sector, his solid financial track record, and his deep knowledge of regulated markets. In this way, we are strengthening our governance structure and adding a strategic vision that will be key to Redexis' growth."

"A key element of our strategy is the transformation and adaptation of our business towards renewable gases, both in our infrastructure and production activities. We are convinced that green gas is an essential vector for decarbonizing both the residential segment and industrial customers," concluded López Soria.

Juan Lasala holds a degree in Business Studies from Universidad Complutense de Madrid and completed an Executive Management Program at IESE Business School. He has extensive professional experience in strategic sectors such as energy, infrastructure, and telecommunications.

He began his professional career at a multinational auditing firm and subsequently held positions of responsibility in several companies in the financial area, where he specialized in strategic planning, management control, and corporate operations, before joining the Red Eléctrica Group in 2001, where he developed a career spanning almost two decades.

During that period, he was Director of Planning and Control, assuming responsibility for international and telecommunications, Chief Financial Officer (CFO), and, between 2015 and 2019, CEO of the group. Under his leadership, Red Eléctrica consolidated its regulated activity and expanded into areas such as international infrastructure and telecommunications, with flagship projects mainly in Peru, Chile, and Spain. He also drove its technological transformation and strengthened its traditional business, positioning it as a benchmark in sustainability and energy transition.

Throughout his career, he has served on various boards of directors, both in listed companies and in the private sector. Lasala will bring valuable strategic insight at a key moment in the development of Spain's renewable energy system.

The new non-executive chairman succeeds Joaquin Coronado, who has been linked to the company during the last years as chairman.
